NCC Group recognised as 'large established player' in Managed Detection and Response (MDR) by independent research firm

NCC Group has been recognised in the Forrester's Now Tech: Managed Detection and Response (MDR) Services Providers, Q4 2020 Report, as a large established player.

The report which provides an overview of 42 MDR services providers across the information technology sector has been published to help security and risk professionals understand the value they can expect from an MDR provider and to select one based on expertise and response actions.

The report has been put together following analysis of the MDR market on two factors: market presence and functionality.

"We've worked tirelessly to demonstrate our expertise and experience in this area since the MDR market was established in 2016. We're really proud of inclusion in this report, which we believe recognises our well established customer offering," comments Tim Anderson, Commercial Director for NCC Group's Global Managed Services.

NCC Group's MDR services bring threat intelligence, monitoring and incident response together to increase customers' confidence in detecting and responding to cyber incidents.

Its unique threat intelligence services and use of analytics and machine learning to identify threats provide a differentiated detection and protection service, with multi-geography security operations centres offering resilient global coverage.
